

Business Man Is Suggested as GOP Candidate in '40

Party Should Break Precedent to Get Best Nominee, Lawrence Says

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington—Republicans today are talking of Dewey or Taft for their presidential nominee, but, strangely enough, a vast number of persons in the Republican party want an altogether different type of candidate, and, for one reason or another, fear they cannot have such a candidate.

What the Republican argument of the last six years says and implies is that business and government do not work together because the New Deal puts reform ahead of recovery, whereas business men insist—and most business men are Republicans—that reform and recovery should go together without one destroying the other.

What the Republican really wants is a man who understands the economic situation, who has had some experience with the large mechanism called business and who is broad-gauged enough to deal with political factors as well. But it is significant of our political habit and tradition to date that only men who have been active in the political arena, as, for instance, senators Taft and Vandenberg or District Attorney Dewey of New York, are considered eligible.

Bolder Group
The Democrats are a bolder group. If they want to violate a tradition or ignore a precedent, they do so because they are forthright in their conviction that the thing they propose or the man they put forward is more important than the precedent.

Would the Republicans, therefore, dare to name a business man for president? And is there any business man who could combine political ability, economic experience, a good radio voice, a good debating skill, a keen sense of public policy with the usual qualifications of a nominee for the presidency?

There are doubtless several business men who could fill that bill, but there is one in particular who lately has been talked about as the very type who could make a real presidential race and give the country an insight into the economic and business problems that must be solved if jobs are to be created and prosperity is to be restored. The individual in question is Wendell L. Wilkie, a native of Indiana, a self-made man, a lawyer, an excellent debater and a liberal rather than a conservative or reactionary.

Utility Man
Right off the bat, the politically minded will say, "You couldn't elect a utility man." But that's the tradition or precedent and pre-supposes that, because a man has been the successful head of a successful business and is himself honest and conscientious, he must not be nominated because his position can be misrepresented by demagogic attack. The Republicans, on the other hand, will have as their principal appeal next time the man who has led the country out of the economic mess into which it has been plunged. If, despite the fact that Wendell Wilkie has been a utility man, he could be depended upon to lead the nation to recovery, the circumstance of his business affiliation would disappear.

A good example of the exaggerated importance of such alleged political disadvantage was the fact that President Roosevelt used to take trips on the yacht of Vincent Astor, millionaire, and it never prevented his re-nomination or reelection. The reason is that the public is much more interested in a man's philosophy and deeds than in attacks on his imaginary position. Mr. Wilkie's identification with a public utility has made him blind to social evils or to the rights of the underprivileged, he would be politically ineluctable, but he happens to be the kind of business man who knows much more about how to make New Deal objectives practical and workable than the men up the New Deal. It is one of the tragedies of the era that he was not called to public service by the president, for he is a Democrat by tradition and a liberal Democrat, too. His point of view coincides far more, however, with that of Vice President Garner or the independent Democrats in the senate than with ultra-conservatives. Many Republicans have said they would vote for that sort of Democrat if named to the Republican ticket. In Wendell Wilkie, the Republicans would have an independent Democrat with a business ability and a leadership capacity which would fit the pattern that nine out of ten Republicans really want but do not venture to ask for.

Mr. Wilkie's latest pronouncement is an article in the current issue of "The Atlantic Monthly" which already has been widely commented on. It was written in the same objective spirit in which he has tackled public questions for the last several years. For Wendell Wilkie was not a part of the utility business during its financial pyramiding era, having come from an Akron, Ohio, law office only since the depression began. He has not hesitated to acknowledge the mistakes his industry made. He has never so much as intimated, so far as this writer knows, that he would permit his name to be considered in political combat. But his name is one that fits the demand the Republicans are making for "confidence" and fair dealing in the government's relations with business. And if he will not consent to become a candidate, there are other business men perhaps who have had somewhat similar background. Must the Republicans consider only politicians? The Democrats do not hesitate to break precedents, and there is no sound reason why the Republicans should not frankly and honestly name the man who, in their opinion, can pull the country out of its economic plight of huge debt, vast unemployment, and stagnant business.

Next Big Job Is Revenue Bill to Balance Budget

State Administration Has Variety of Ideas to Raise Money

Madison—The second big job of the Heil administration, enactment of a revenue bill which must bring in many millions of dollars to balance the state budget which was passed yesterday, will be begun in "a week or ten days," according to Senator Otto Mueller of Wausau, chairman of the legislative joint finance committee which will formulate the measure.

Mueller said that the administration has already drawn up a variety of measures which are being considered for balancing the budget. Although he didn't say so, the list is known to include liquor tax increases, cigarette taxes, beer taxes, sales taxes, income tax revisions, and several minor measures such as taxes on mutual insurance companies.

Conferences between Heil and his legislative lieutenants the week will decide which of the measures will be incorporated in the administration's tax bill, Mueller said.

Wants Conferences
Governor Heil had previously reviewed that he wants to "talk it over" with the good senators' assemblymen" before he submits his taxing ideas to the house.

The budget passage in record time in the senate, after unprecedented speed in the assembly, was interpreted as signifying that the administration still maintains control of the legislature on the measures which are regarded as crucial. Although some of the Democrats wavered on some proposed amendments, there were votes to spare on every roll call.

The Fox river valley senators, with the exception of Senator Mike Kresky of Green Bay, Progressive, stood with the administration throughout. Mike Mack of Shiocton, Taylor Brown of Oshkosh, and Fred R. Fischer of Waupaca, did not participate in the debate but followed the generalship of Floor-leader Maurice Coakley without a single dissent. Senator Ernest G. Sauld of Pembine, although at his home ill, was paired on the budget roll calls in support of the Republicans, while Francis Yindra of Manitowoc, a Democrat, supported some amendments, opposed others, and voted with the minority on final passage.

It was said that Yindra at Thursday night session had drawn up a substitute amendment for the budget bill which would have cut all appropriations 20 per cent below the Heil figures. He failed to bring it out of his desk, however.

Bob Neller, Appleton Ventriloquist, Gains Theatrical Heights After Long, Hard Climb

BY ALLEN P. WALSH
Washington, D. C.—Bob Neller, 28, the Appleton boy who came to the top of his profession the hard way, had just finished his ventriloquist act at the Capitol theater in Washington, where he played for a week ending Friday, May 19. Bob is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Neller, 410 E. Washington street, Appleton.

Out in the lobby two ladies stopped just a moment for the usual peck in the looking glass and the ever present observation at the close of the stage show.

"Pretty good bill tonight," one of them remarked, "and I'm afraid I'm not going to have so much fun listening to the radio programs on Sunday nights hereafter."

"That good-looking chap and his dummy really were clever, weren't they?" The response was thoughtful and the inflection was one of surprise. "I think that boy is the best ventriloquist I ever heard and I was sorry when his act was over."

Really Liked Him
And these opinions expressed a pretty general consensus of opinion among the critical Washington theater goers, who have broken the heart and the spirit of more than one stage performer. But they really liked Bob Neller and perhaps, if they knew his story, they'd like him even more.

For the Appleton boy and the former University of Wisconsin student found the road to fame routed along a lot of detours. Ever since the time as a boy of 11 when he heard the Great Lester, foremost ventriloquist of another generation, throw his voice all over the stage and down through the audience in the old Appleton theater to the delight and amazement of a thrilled audience, Bob Neller has had the ambition and desire to scale the heights in this still unusual line of theatrical achievement.

And despite the fact that he has reached a pinnacle achieved by no more than one other individual, he is still reaching, still hoping that there's something more in the ventriloquist's art that he can perfect and create. He has played the finest theaters in America with his own act, and he has worked for weeks at a time with such orchestras as Wayne King's and Rudy Vallee's, but he refuses to be satisfied.

Brand New Stunt
Right now he's working on a brand new stunt that he believes is original in ventriloquism. He hopes to have it ready within the next month. The dummy is none dramatic and serious. The master won't be in the picture at all, for the stage will be dark except for a pinpoint light that will display only the head of the wooden midget.

And then the dummy will go into his act. "Ten Minutes to Live," bringing out all the loneliness, the anxiety, the longing, of a person cooped up in a suitcase all day long except for 10 minutes during his act.

And this person wants to live like other people, wants to know their joys and sorrows, their thoughts, their impulses. But because he looks like a dummy, people forget that perhaps he could be a little human, too. Bob realizes he's attempting something very dangerous, but if he can bring his audience to realize that the dummy is truly in earnest and if he can bring his listeners into the mood serious, he believes the little sketch may be a sensation. Bob's first dummy after he heard the Great Lester was fashioned from an old coffee can with a mask bought at the dime store for a face. The stooge was called Clarence because, paradoxically, the master didn't like the name. There followed hours of practice and endless work, and perfection came eventually as a natural result of effort and concentration, because Bob took no lessons from any other individual.

Draws Bergen's Praise
Indeed, no less a personage than Eddie Bergen himself made the statement in a radio broadcast some months ago: "The greatest natural ventriloquist I have ever seen was a youth named Bob Neller whom I met in a fraternity house at Madison a few years back."

Bob recalls the occasion vividly. Bergen and Charlie McCarthy were on their way up the ladder at the time and stopped off to fill an engagement at a Madison theater. Bergen had been a member of the Delta Upsilon fraternity at Northwestern university, while Neller was a "D.U." at Wisconsin. After the show the two ventriloquists met in the chapter house at Madison and fought a verbal duel with their two dummies the rest of the night, much to the joy of the other

NELLER TO PERFORM AT ASTOR HOTEL

After hearing the Great Lester, foremost ventriloquist of another generation, Bob Neller, son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Neller, 410 E. Washington street, Appleton, made up his mind to scale the heights in this unusual line of entertainment. He found the road to fame cluttered with detours but has gained a position rivaling that of Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy. Neller has played the finest theaters in the country and has worked with many "big time" orchestras. He will open a long engagement with Rudy Vallee's orchestra at the Astor hotel in New York May 22.

brethren. Neither of the men will ever forget that evening.

Neller's work with his improved dummy, "Izzy," began to attract the attention of those interested in amusements throughout the Fox river valley. He recalls that the first money he earned was three $1 bills received as the result of his share in a De Molay program.

Was U. of W. Athlete

All through the years he spent in Appleton High school he worked towards the perfection of his art. Later, at the University of Wisconsin, he was in demand at fraternity gatherings and social events, and took part in the productions of the Haresfoot club, cradle of so many widely known and famous entertainers. Bob also was an athlete at the university and won the Big Ten championship on the horizontal bars.

After leaving school at Madison, Bob went to Chicago trying to get a break with his ventriloquist act, later traveling to the west coast where he continued to have a lot of luck, most of it bad. Back and forth across the continent he traveled, changing locations with the seasons, working at jobs here and there, but always retaining in the back of his mind the hope that some day his chance with the little dummy that meant so much to him would come.

Bob got his first big chance just a little more than 2 years ago, grasped it with both hands, and never let go. Guest night at the Coconut Grove in Los Angeles one night in March, 1937, marked the turning point in his career. The act proved so popular that Neller and the little wooden wedge were engaged for a run of six weeks at the Sir Francis Drake hotel in San Francisco.

Summer with Vallee
Then came a cross country tour at hotels throughout the middle west and in eastern cities, ending with a week at the Radio City Music Hall in New York City. Bob and "Izzy" caught on with Rudy Vallee's orchestra at the close of their weekly bookings and spent all of the summer of 1938 with that band.

Other bands, including Wayne

King's took the engaging little dummy and his master on tours all over the country, and almost two years to a day after getting their big break at the Coconut Grove on the west coast, Bob Neller and his impish upstart were back again, this time stars in their own right.

Engagements on the west coast ended in January of this year, and Bob then joined Wayne King and his band at the Drake hotel in Chicago for another run of six weeks, followed by further engagements in theaters and hotels.

The week at the Capitol in Washington was Neller's second trip here. He and his partner will open a long engagement with Rudy Vallee's orchestra at the Astor hotel in New York City on May 22.

His "partner" at the moment is one of a long line of dummies, each one an improvement over the last, and an amusing and interesting evolution from the days of Clarence. The present stooge is called "Reggie," short for Reginald J. Trickpus, and the wooden minx has thirteen separate and distinct facial movements.

"Sure, it's been a hard climb and a long one," Bob mused, "but maybe Reggie and I will be all the better for it. At least, looking back, I don't believe I'd change a thing if I had to do it over. It's been fun and hard work, but I've accomplished something that apparently doesn't happen to everyone. I've seen some of my boyhood dreams realized, and that should be satisfaction enough."

The Crux of the Problem of Recovery

The great achievement of Senator O'Mahoney's committee is that it has succeeded in defining the problem of recovery. If the country, if Congress, and if the President, would only fix in mind the elementary and fundamental proposition that has now been demonstrated by the testimony of Professor Hansen and Dr. Currie, there would be a lot more light and very much less heat in the current controversies.

In fact, a full understanding of the proposition would go far to solve the deadlock between Congress and the Administration, and between Washington and the business community. The underlying truth, on which competent men are now agreed, would, if it were sufficiently realized, dispel a large part of the confusion, the suspicion and the destructive divisions that are paralyzing this country at home and impairing its influence abroad.

I know this is a large assertion, and it may seem rather simple-minded these days to believe that there is such a thing as truth which can prevail over prejudice and partisanship. But, nevertheless, I believe that violent and irreconcilable controversy would give way to constructive debate among men, be they economists, Republican business men or New Dealers, who have studied and digested the Hansen and Currie testimony.

Recovery Depends on Capital Investment
The fundamental proposition that has been demonstrated in their testimony is, as Professor Hansen put it, "that the margin of income which is created by the capital-goods industries... fills the gap between prosperity and depression." It is, in other words, the money spent on machinery and on all kinds of construction which determines whether times are good or bad, whether there is full employment or unemployment.

We have, of course, heard this before. We have heard it a thousand times from Wall Street bankers, from corporation managers, from Republican orators, from conservative editors. But we are now hearing it also from the President from this committee which has in charge the laying of the basis for New Deal policy, and from economists who are among the most trusted technical advisers of the administration.

So at least on this proposition, that recovery depends on capital investment there exists complete agreement in all quarters. We can go further. We can now say in fairly specific figures what is the problem of recovery. According to disinterested calculations which are not, I think, disputed, the annual capital investment in the United States needs to be about 18 billions a year. This was the average for 1923 to 1929, and with that much capital investment the nation will be prosperous its income will be between 75 and 80 billions.

The figure that the layman needs to keep in mind is this 18 billions of capital investment needed for prosperity. He can realize how crucial it is when he sees that in 1931, capital investment fell to less than 9 billions, in 1932 to about 3 billions. This fall in capital investment, brought the whole nation to come down from well over 70 billions to a little more than 40 billions. So it is clear that to be worried about the amount of capital investment is to be worried about the fundamental difference between national riches and national poverty, between bad times, fairly bad times, and really good times.

Problem is How to Get Money Invested
Broadly speaking, the problem of recovery is, therefore, the problem of getting 18 billions invested each year. That is what is worrying Wall Street and that is what is worrying the New Dealers who are putting their minds on the subject.

Now, we can get further light on the problem by comparing national investments in 1925, which was a good year, with 1937, which started out to be the best year the country has known since the crash. In 1925 the nation made capital invest-

New Traffic Rules Set Up at Waupaca

Policemen Busy Issuing Warnings Under Amended Ordinance

Waupaca—Officers were busy Friday and Saturday enforcing a traffic regulation ordinance, which was amended at the last meeting of the city council. The amendment to the ordinance has been under discussion by the city father for the last six weeks, with final action taken Tuesday evening.

The officers restricted their efforts the last of the week to warning violators of the 90-minute parking order as well as those who were out well within the designated parking sections. Red cards on the cars were found by several of Waupaca's citizens.

The ordinance as amended provides that no vehicle shall be parked whether attended or unattended, upon any street unless parallel to the edge of street, headed in the direction of traffic, on the right side of the curb or edge of the street, except upon those streets which have been marked or signed for angle parking.

Bus stops have been designated, and no operator of any vehicle, other than a bus may park in an official designated bus stop; and no vehicle or taxicab may park in an officially designated taxi cab or hackney stand, except that an operator of any passenger vehicle may stop or stand for the purpose of and while actually engaged in the loading and unloading of passengers.

A maximum fine of $5 will be imposed for violation of the ordinance.

Home Economics Style Show Set for Tuesday

Waupaca—The annual public spring style show of the high school home economics department of the leading economists and of the reformers in the New Deal, is the area of true debate. The question to be debated is how much capital private enterprise could invest under favorable conditions and how much government investment is needed to supplement it.

This debate is confused, however, by the intervention of two groups of extremists. There are the very reactionary who are dogmatically opposed to the whole idea of expenditures for social services. There is the radical group inside the New Deal, who do not want private enterprise to invest what it can, because their objective is not social reform or recovery by the substitution of political for private control of the industrial system.

Were the confusion wrought by these reactionaries and radicals clarified and dispelled, we should soon see that actually the choice is not between private and public investment. We should see that our real task is to encourage private enterprise to invest what it can, and then to supplement it by public investment.

Bill Would Include Menominee Children In Tribe Enrolment

Post-Crescent Washington Bureau—The committee on Indian affairs of the house of representatives has reported favorably on the bill of Congressman Reid F. Murray, Waupaca Republican, which provides for the enrolment of Menominee children in the tribe. Congressman John C. Schafer, Milwaukee Republican member of the committee, reported the bill to the house.

The measure, which has been approved by the Menominee general council, as well as by Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes, is in the nature of an amendment to the act of enrolment of 1934, which provided for the enrolment of existing tribesmen with one quarter Menominee blood or more, but made no provision for the enrolment of children.

Under the new act, the names of unenrolled Menominee children, born before 1934 of an enrolled parent or parents living on the reservation at the time of the children's birth, will be put on the official roll.

The names of children born since then, who are qualified under the 1934 act, will also be automatically enrolled, regardless of the derivation of their Menominee blood, the bill states.

Papers Wrong in Pretending To Take Demagogues Seriously

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER

Washington—Personal memo on the newspaper business: The chief reason that demagogues thrive is that the newspapers—and the radio—pretend to take them seriously. Not editorially perhaps, but in the news columns, which is what really counts.

If you asked newspaper men here or elsewhere, what they really thought of this latest blast out of the Dies investigating committee, I suspect that most of them would say it was 90 per cent hogwash, played up out of all proportion to its real importance. Any skilled newspaperman, knowing nothing about the story, could read it in the newspapers and be certain that it was flimsy "headline" stuff.

The offense of the newspapers is that making a fetish of "objectivity" they present this kind of dubious material exactly as if they actually took it seriously. I find in the latest editions of the Washington newspapers, several columns, played in the lead position, with headlines giving it additional importance, the latest blast out of the Dies committee describing an "anti-Jew crusade."

High up in the accounts in headline or in black-face type is the word that John D. M. Hamilton, chairman of the Republican national committee, is to be called before the Dies committee because, according to a witness, he "gave the names of Republican committeemen to participants in the (anti-Semitic) campaign."

Every newspaper man in Washington knows that anybody, by writing to the Republican national committee, can obtain a printed list of the committeemen. He can get the Democratic names by writing to Jim Farley. There is no secret about that. The lists are printed in the world Almanac, as John Hamilton pointed out when, for later editions, he had an opportunity to set the matter in its proper perspective.

Inference is that it was Special Favor. But the news accounts kick off with the plain flat, unexplained statement of a witness that Hamilton sent a committee list to the anti-Semitic agitators leaving the inference to be drawn by the average reader that in some way Hamilton was mixed up in the activity.

It was Hamilton who spoke out last fall against the Jew-baiting senatorial primary campaign in Kansas of Rev. Gerald Winrod, a Republican. When some of us months ago said the Dies testimony "exposing" red activity was trivial, unverified stuff blown up with hot air, we were regarded suspiciously as secret radical sympathizers. I hope that it is permissible to similarly point out the weaknesses in the present smearing treatment of John Hamilton without being regarded as a secret sympathizer with the Republican national committee.

Those outside the newspaper business complain that the press "distorts" the news, meaning that it is twisted and given an editorial slant. That is not the trouble. Factual Reporting May Give Wrong Impression.

Newspapers have made a fetish of "factual objectivity" and have carried it to such extremes that, as seen in this instance, a "dead-pan" straightaway statement, all literally correct, leaves a completely erroneous impression with the reader. And if the reader is left with an incorrect impression, the reporting, no matter how "factual," it may be in the literal sense, is misleading. Is such misleading of the reader to be justified on the ground that "Does said it and therefore it is news?" To say that, Hamilton according to a witness, gave the names of Republican com-

Plea for Active Laity Climaxes Holy Name Rally

6,000 Persons From 3
Counties Participate in Kaukauna Meeting

Kaukauna — A plea for a more active laity by Roland J. Steine, prominent Milwaukee attorney, climaxed a Holy Name rally of District 2 of the Green Bay diocese which attracted 6,000 people from three counties to Kaukauna yesterday. Steine spoke at LaFollette park, where 4,000 men had marched in a parade from the north side to the accompaniment of 13 bands. Guests of honor reviewed the procession from a stand alongside the municipal building.

The Rev. Alphonsé Roder, pastor of St. Mary's church, and Mayor Lewis F. Nelson gave addresses of welcome, introduced by John Van de Loo, general chairman of the rally. The Rev. Mr. Roder hailed the large attendance as indicative that in an age of decreasing faith many still take religion seriously. Mayor Nelson extended the city's greetings to the men from Calumet, Winnebago and Outagamie counties, and quoted from early explorers who brought Christianity to this region.

Steine Speaks

After remarking that thousands coming out for the rally was in itself one of the greatest messages that could be delivered, Steine pleaded for a more articulate laity. The failure of laymen to defend their faith has made persecution possible and is responsible for most human ills, he said.

Persecution and intolerance have always been and will always be, Steine stated.

Prejudice, bigotry and intolerance of whatever variety, class, race or religion, is probably the most venomous poison to pollute the stream of liberty. Every now and then Catholicism is the target of these attacks.

Steine traced movements against the church since the settling of America. He listed as prejudices the arguments that the church was the enemy of civilization, that by opposing education vice was spread, and that nothing constructive had been done by the church.

The speaker described accomplishments of the Catholic church since the fall of the Roman empire in 476.

"Through the church womanhood was elevated and liberated. The church tried to wipe out feudalism and slavery. The great discoveries of the world — paper, printing, astronomical, industrial, agricultural and many others — all are Catholic efforts."

"The church has never opposed education but has fostered it. The great universities of Europe, such as Oxford, Seville, Rome and Cambridge, had Catholic impetus."

"It is said we can't be Catholics and Americans at the same time, that we are opposed to freedom, liberty and democracy. But it was a Catholic, Archbishop Langton, who pressed upon an English king and Magna Carta, with its trial by jury and no taxation without representation, principles which have come down the years to be put in our constitution."

Chorus Performs

A male choir of 75 voices, under the direction of Harold Hollman, rendered the sacred hymns at the benediction following Steine's address. Celebrant at benediction was the Rt. Rev. Msgr. John Hummel, Menasha; deacon, the Very Rev. Alois Bastian, Oshkosh; sub-deacon, the Very Rev. Henry E. Hunkel, Chilton; master of ceremonies, the Very Rev. John J. APPLETON RESIDENTS PUBLICLY PRAISE MERIT OF GLY-CAS

Mrs. Margaret Deischel Finds In Gly-Cas What She Had Been Wanting For Years; Happy Over Surprising Results
Modern Capsule Remedy Has Given Her

Many medicines have been introduced here in the past few years and for the past five years I have suffered dreadfully with awful gas, belching and pain in my stomach. My kidney action became irregular and disturbed my rest and sleep. I had no appetite and was completely tired-out all of the time. I lacked the pep and energy necessary to get about and enjoy life for practically everything I did was an awful effort for me. For five long years constipation had been the "dread of my life" and in spite of the many medicines I tried I was unable to find something to help me. It was not until I began Gly-Cas that I found the medicine I had been wanting all of this time.

of the medicines tried before. Complete satisfaction has been given many who for years before had been miserable with so-called rheumatic pains, backaches, distress after meals, gas and bloated stomach, dizziness, biliousness, headaches and nervousness which so frequently accompany faulty bowel elimination. For example, read what Mrs. Margaret Deischel, 146 West Foster Street, Appleton, respected and well known lady of this city who has lived here for the past thirty-five years, said recently in talking with the Gly-Cas Man at Volk's Drug Store, 134 East College Ave.:

"I have only taken Gly-Cas a short time but the results that have been given me have been wonderful," said Mrs. Deischel. "My ill-

Patri Suggests Camera as Suitable Birthday Present

BY ANGELO PATRI

If I could give but one thing to a child on his birthday, his tenth one up to the place where he doesn't want the candles counted, it would be a camera. There is more fun, more good health, more spiritual values to be gotten out of the intelligent use of a camera than anyone, who has never owned one, suspects.

Boys and girls in their teens will get great pleasure out of walking in the country, and if they have cameras along their enjoyment is trebled. At first the shots are taken at everything, good, bad and indifferent, and most of the results are pretty bad, but in time, certain choices are made, greater care is exercised, and the interest deepens into positive preferences for subjects and treatments.

Each picture-taker chooses his field. One boy I know specialized in cloud forms. A girl takes flower pictures. So it goes. One takes water scenes. Another is excited by construction projects. Buses and grasses have opened a field of adventure for one young person. Old men are a young girl's specialty and she has some lovely studies. The hiking club members have many and varied interests, but most of them are on the lookout for the animals.

The lovely thing about all this is that the children have a worthwhile interest in things about them, that they are training themselves to look for beauty. They find beauty in everything from stones to spires, from grubs to the sky. They add to their understanding of life and its ways every time they take a picture, and never do they, by a single hair's breadth, tend to hurt anything or anybody in their work. Their horizons broaden as they go forward and their lives grow richer with every step I can't say that about every other game they enjoy.

The camera comes in handy in school. The students in junior and high school make use of it for recording their work. It is a sure, easily made record, one whose accuracy is not questioned. And it is an interesting record. All the world likes pictures. Few enjoy reading reports and notes, however important they may be to the student. Compositions, themes, theses, are important to the students who write them, and if they are illustrated by pictures made on the spot, their importance to the readers is made sharper and clearer.

Mr. Patri will give personal attention to inquiries from parents and school teachers on the care and technique of children. Write him in care of this paper, enclosing a three-cent stamp, addressed envelope for reply.

CASE RECORDS OF A PSYCHOLOGIST

By Dr. George W. Crane
Psychologist, Northwestern University

Never scoff at the great science of advertising. Just read today's case and see what it did for Michelangelo and Cleopatra, the Mayo Clinic, and Fenton G. Incidentally you receive a dime's worth of newspaper today but pay only 3 cents for it because the advertising pages make up the difference.

CASE N-143: Fenton G., aged 32, is a successful modern dentist. "A lot of the members of our dental society are hostile to him, though," one of his colleagues informed me. "They claim that he turns out his work too hurriedly, while they stress quality, with little or no thought about financial matters. But I can't help admiring Fenton. He has learned to talk German."

and Italian, Yiddish and Polish, at least to the extent of greeting his patients in their native tongue. "There is no question about his popularity with them. I have visited his office several times, and he always has his waiting room full. He keeps two chairs operating, and impresses me as being reasonably conscientious."

"Dr. Crane, don't you think a man can be too conscientious? And is it true that quality is the best sales argument?"

You readers are doubtless familiar with the slogan that if you build the best mouse trap in the world, you can hide away in the midst of the forest, but the world will beat a broad path to your door.

That's largely true, today. Unless you advertise your product personally, or hire a professional advertiser to do the job for you, both you and your mousetrap will mildew and rot in anonymity.

Why do patients leave their home towns and go to the Mayo Clinic? Especially when there are equally good surgeons in their own city? The answer is simply "advertising." Our medical, dental, law and engineering schools still harp on quality and ridicule advertising, but those graduates who keep out of bankruptcy are not blushing introverts, or shrinking violets. They are known around the town. How do they get so well known? By intelligent forms of advertising, such as Fenton demonstrates in today's case history.

Don't Scoff At Advertising. Even Michelangelo appreciated the essential value of advertising as a means to professional success. He deliberately tinted one of his own works, for example, in order to give it the impression of an antique, after which it was sold at a large sum to Raffaele Riario, cardinal of San Giorgio.

Cleopatra crashed the party, so to speak, and gained an audience with the inaccessible Caesar by having herself rolled in a rug and delivered to the conquering Julius, who was so impressed with this bit of advertising strategy that he became intrigued with her intellect as well as her figure.

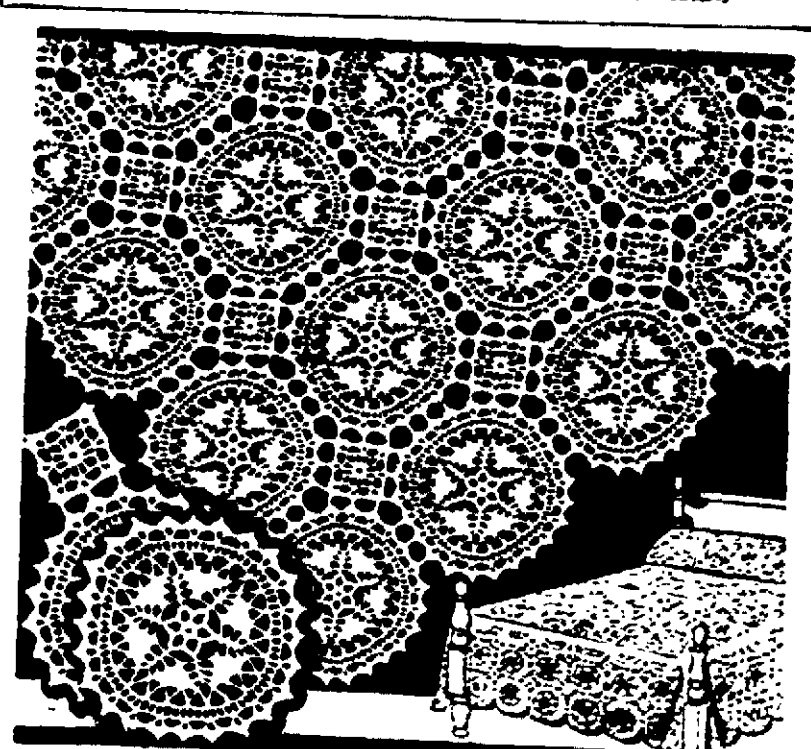

Colleagues here in Chicago of the great John B. Murphy, father of modern surgery, tell me that Dr. Murphy had a paid press agent who always saw to it that Dr. Murphy's picture and an appropriate story got into the Chicago newspapers whenever he arrived from a surgical visit to New York or elsewhere.

Advertising Is A Scientific Tool. As professor of the Psychology of Advertising and Selling, I may be accused of an undue admiration for the modern science of advertising, but don't you believe it.

Advertising is a scientific tool of business as well as the professions. All he had to do was refuse to tuff the fourth round of hearts and declarer would have been helpless. Of course West would have to discard a club, not a diamond, but that would not take much vision after declarer's club discard. Now, if declarer tried to drop the jack of clubs, he would come to grief, and if he tried the impossible throw-in play, by leading a spade to put West on lead, West would have an easy and safe exit in his third diamond.

Their graduates know how to remove your appendix or tonsils, and how to fill, straight or extract your teeth, but they are given no help in the essential job of "prospecting," bringing patients to their offices.

Patience Is Necessary in Bridge Play

BY ELY CULBERTSON

Patience is just as necessary a virtue at the bridge table as it is in more prosaic walks of life. The defender was in a great hurry to cash a sure trick against a slam contract in the following hand and, as a result, let the setting trick escape him.

The bidding:
South West North East
1 spade Pass 2 clubs Pass
3 clubs Pass 3 no trump Pass
4 no trump Pass 5 no trump Pass
6 clubs Pass 6 spades Pass

This bidding was nothing to elicit paeans of praise. I have no great fault to find with North's initial take-out to the unbid club suit, inasmuch as he had great side suit compensation and no perfect bid was available. North could have bid two no trump, but the blank A-K of diamonds suggested that the combined hands probably would play better in a suit contract. It was South's four no trump bid that gave the first impetus to ward the slam that never should have been reached. South had a fair hand, but his spade suit was far too weak, after only a secondarily raise from partner, to suggest slam visions. North, however, is greatly blamed for taking South's six club bid to six spades. His reason for doing so, as a matter of fact, is my reason for usually looking with disfavor on responses based on unbid suits. No matter how many raises responder receives he always is afraid to play the final contract in that suit.

West decided that there was a fine chance that his partner could ruff an opening club lead, hence led his fourth highest. Declarer captured East's blank king and studied the dummy without enthusiasm. At least one trump trick would have to be lost and, unless a miracle happened in clubs and the jack were to drop on the next lead, there also would be a natural club loser. After deep cogitation declarer thought he saw some light. He would need the cooperation of the defenders, but perhaps they would be kind enough to extend it. At the second trick declarer led his diamond to dummy and cashed the second diamond trick, discarding a low heart. He then played the ace, king, and another heart, ruffing the third round.

So far, so good. The hearts had broken 3-3. The next move was to cash the spade king and then cross to dummy's ace. The 3-2 break of the spades was another cause for satisfaction, but the crucial point had not yet arrived. It did, however, on the next play. Dummy's established fourth heart was led and declarer discarded a club. West swooped down upon this trick with his high trump, as though that card would vanish into thin air if it were not taken on the spot. Having done so, however, West gazed helplessly at his hand for a safe exit. Too late, it occurred to him that a diamond return would be ruffed by dummy's white declarer discarded another club, obviously his last losing club. But West's actual choice of the club eight return was no better. Dummy's ten was put up with a silent prayer by declarer and, when it held, the contract was "in the bag."

It may be superfluous to point out just how bad West's play was. All he had to do was refuse to tuff the fourth round of hearts and declarer would have been helpless. Of course West would have to discard a club, not a diamond, but that would not take much vision after declarer's club discard. Now, if declarer tried to drop the jack of clubs, he would come to grief, and if he tried the impossible throw-in play, by leading a spade to put West on lead, West would have an easy and safe exit in his third diamond.

Beauty and You

by PATRICIA LINDSAY

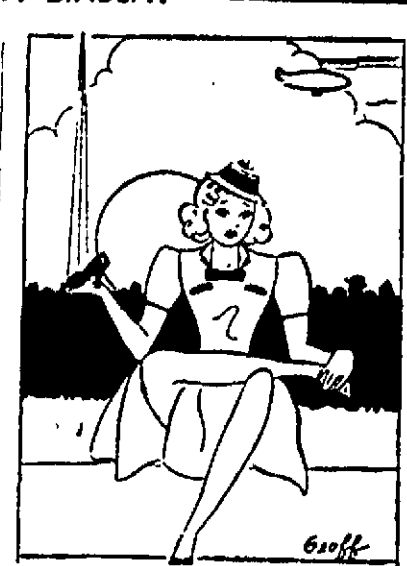

With the New York World's Fair and the San Francisco Fair calling us these vacation days, we must look to our feet! In the final analysis, your enjoyment of a gigantic fair greatly depends upon the comfort and endurance of your feet!

Thanks to new shoe designs we need not sacrifice style for foot comfort. Every leading designer has created a "Fair" shoe with firm supporting insole and a heel the height for easy walking. So if you are an "out-of-towner" be assured that good walking shoes are the approved fashion for fair reveling. High heeled shoes which give little support will be reserved only for the dancing hours.

Before Starting
Take my advice and prepare your feet for the ordeal ahead of them before you go to the fair grounds! Massage does wonders! Use a special foot lotion, or a hand cream, and massage the entire foot after bathing it. Rub well between each toe and work hard around the instep. Place your thumb on instep and fingers under the arch and massage in a spiral movement.

You will find that your foot skin will absorb most of the cream and there will be little surplus to rub off before powdering them with a foot powder (which is more cooling than talc).

Pedicure Toes
A weekly pedicure is a good insurance against a lot of unhappy moments. Keeping your feet massaged, the cuticle controlled and the nails filed evenly are the very first steps to foot comfort, and a great saving on sheer silk hose. If cuticle is stubborn, dip pads of cotton in warm cuticle oil and cover the nail. Leave the pads on for two or three minutes to soften the cuticle. Then work it with an orange stick. If you file your nails after such a soaking you will find that they will have a smoother edge—a good protection for hose.

This foolish beauty neglected to care for her feet before going to "The World of Tomorrow."

Upon Returning
No doubt you will spend more than one day doing the fair. When you return give your feet a contrast bath to revive them for your night's spree. Fill a basin or tub with hot water and a handful of common salt or epsom salts. Soak them for a minute, then dip them into cold water for a minute, then again into the hot salt water. So alternate ten times. You will be delighted with the relief. A quick massage will counteract the drying effect of the day's tramping and the salt bathing. Leave them exposed to the air while you stretch out on your back for several minutes relaxation!

This simple morning and night care will make the fair less of an ordeal and will leave you with enough pep to enjoy night life on the side.

"Beauty Through Foot Health" is a leaflet available to you if you enclose a self-addressed envelope bearing a three-cent stamp with your request. Address me care of this paper.

Friction Results When One Expects Too Much of Mate

BY DOROTHY DIX

The reason why there are so many disgruntled husbands and wives who, as the phrase goes, are "disappointed" in marriage is because they demand too many perfections in the one individual to whom they are united. They expect them all, and for one poor, weak human being to possess a dozen different antagonistic qualities.

DOROTHY DIX

Sometimes it makes you think that the polygamists and polyandrists do these things better. At least, when a polygamist desires a blond wife or a brunette one, or a wife who is glamorous or one who is a good, hard worker, or a wife who has the beauty of youth or the wisdom of age, he man contemplating matrimony would do well to examine himself and determine to what extent he will be able to fill all four roles. For by so doing he will insure a successful marriage; that is, a peaceful one which is all the poor dope has any right to expect.

And at that he will break even with his wife, for he will expect her to be (1) a combination cook and lady, (2) a domestic servant and a social leader, (3) keep perfectly young and beautiful, (4) a game wife and a play girl. But, for all that, marriage is a great game if you don't weaken.

Dear Miss Dix—I am 39 years old. My wife is 36. We have been married for fifteen years. The first two or three years went over quite well, and after the children came married life seemed very interesting, but of late some change has come over my wife that I cannot explain. She is unhappy and discontented, constantly complains and finds fault. I am very fond of her, and, thinking perhaps she needed change and cheering up, I embarked on a pleasure campaign, taking her out to suppers and to dance afterward, but she taking in a good picture, but the plan didn't work. Regardless of what I do, nothing seems to please her. Either the show isn't any good, or I danced with some woman she didn't like, or else something happened on the way that displeased her and the battle is on. Our daughter sides with her mother, as though she likes to keep the arguments going, but my son is a regular pal of mine and tries to make peace. This constant nagging makes me lose my interest in my home. I love my family and want life to be as pleasant as possible for them, but how can I make it so with a wife who glooms all the time?

Answer: Evidently your wife is fed up with marriage. For some reason home and husband and children have got on her nerves, and the best remedy for what ails her is to send her away on a good long trip if you can afford it. If not, send her to visit her mother or some relative or friend.

And tell her why you are doing it. Tell her you are not going to stand being nagged and picked on all the time, and that unless she can make up her mind to be pleasant and agreeable at home she needn't bother about hurrying back.

And if that impertinent daughter of yours is too old to turn across your knees and give the spanking she needs so badly, just tell her in terms that she will hear that you will not put up another time with her impudence. You are to blame for not having reared her to treat you with respect, but it isn't too late even now to teach her to at least be polite to the one who feeds and clothes her.

A lot of women, as they get along toward middle age, when the struggle to get a start in the world is over and the children have got big enough not to need their personal care, fall into the disgruntled and melancholy state in which your wife is. Mainly it is because they are bored. They haven't enough to do, and so they get to dwelling on their grievances until they get dissatisfied with their husbands and homes. The best way to snap them out of this morbid state of mind is to send them away among strangers, where they will see different things and where they will have a chance to miss the kind, loving care their husbands have always given them and to appreciate their blessings.

Many a wife goes away from home thinking that she has fallen out of love with her husband and comes back seeing him as a hero and a romance. A railroad ticket would save many a home from being wrecked.

The Home Gardener
By Edwin H. Perkins

Clematis can be used wherever the need for a vine is indicated. The tall, wider growing kinds will quickly cover an entire porch and the smaller, less wild growing sorts are adaptable to covering the back of a fence, and other garden appearances, the entire architecture of the building of which the accessories are a part.

Not so many plantings of clematis are seen these days chiefly because the art of transplanting them, as well as caring for their special needs, is not common information to modern gardeners.

FLOWER-LIKE

OLD HOME WEEK MURDER

by Phoebe Atwood Taylor

The Characters
Asey Mayo, Cape Cod sleuth.
Kay Thayer, girl reporter.

Yesterday: The criminal eludes Asey, but he discovers Lane's car was used. Meanwhile, Brinley picks up one of the dummies he found in the road.

Chapter 45

More About Dummies
"Now, Lane," Asey said, "which was the dummy that you said had dropped, the one that toppled over all the time?"

"That one," Lane said, "with the scar around his neck. The one you just brought in from the lawn. That was the one that dropped, but I fixed it."

"An' this one from Brinley's car, with the stock an' fancy vest?"

"That's the one that just required dropsy," Lane said, "just today. I was going to fix it tomorrow. What in the name—what are you doing?"

Asey set to work disrobing the dummy he had just brought in from the lawn.

"But it's the other one," Kay said. "It's the other one he took Asey! You're working on the one that was here, the one he didn't take, the—"

"I know it," Lane said, "but he continued to rummage around in the pockets and the lining of the tall coat belonging to the figure he had just taken from the lawn."

"There!" Lane said triumphantly at last. "There! Catch, Lane. Catch 'em an' hold onto 'em. Lane's your clues."

Lane and Hamilton stared blankly at the two shells Asey had brought out of the lining of the figure's coat.

Hamilton turned to Kay. "See what I mean?" he asked. "I knew he was after something."

"Asey," Lane said, "how did you guess that?"

"On Monday night," Asey said, "I went to the fire at Slade's shack. N'en I cut across lots to this place. Them dummies scared me to the point of drawin' my gun. But get this, Lane. I draw only three figures. Two women, an' a man. Next day I said something about it, an' you told me that one man kept fallin' down. So I thought been coo'ed the fourth figure'd saw 'em. But it's been bottomin' all this time, just the same. Because I was certain of there bein' three then, an' only three later when Zeb an' I drove up. An' I couldn't remember one on the ground either time."

"But there really are four figures," Kay said. "Two men and two women, what do you mean, only three—?" Lane's look silenced her.

"Put it this way," Asey said. "When I came here first on Monday night, there were three figures standin' outside, but the fourth wasn't on the ground. It was in the woods. An' somebody was busy peelin' off his coat an' things, an' puttin' on the dummy's clothes."

"All he really needed to do," Lane said, "was to pose as a tourist. The tourists never picked those figures apart the last two days."

"Probably would have, if he could have posed as one. But someone's on guard here all the time. Anyone tryin' to find anything is suspect. If he could be sure of gettin' the shells right off, that'd have been fine. But I had to grope for 'em. That's a stiff interlinin'." He knew he might have to grope, an' that'd have given him away."

"What was he after the night I me—?" Lane asked.

"Got to guess at that," Asey told her. "He had a silence. I shouldn't wonder if he didn't intend to silence the cop an' take his shells then. Maybe he was just waitin' for some chance when he could get 'em. But he runs into you, an' into me."

"Now, what about Eloise?"

"Let's settle this first. Tonight our friend comes right out in the open, apparently havin' decided he ain't gettin' places with his skulkin' in his car."

"My car," Lane said.

"Your car, that he's previously borrowed from the fillin' station. I should think that kid there might lose a lot of cars, if that's the way he looks after 'em. Anyway, fellow comes with his radio, goin' full blast, to make us think it's a bunch of kids or parkers or tourists, or all three in one. R'verses his ordinary methods. ference between a "dinner dance" and a "dinner and dance," if any?

Answer: The terms are really interchangeable, although "dinner and dance" is more usually taken to mean dinner in one place followed by dancing elsewhere, or if in the same house, the dinner tables would be cleared and dancing begin after dinner. A "dinner dance" could be the same, but on the other hand it could mean that people are all seated at tables around the ballroom floor and that people dance between the courses at dinner and throughout the evening—always returning after dancing to their own tables.

My Neighbor Says—

Early morning, say from sunrise until 9.30, and from 4 o'clock in the evening until sun-down are the best periods to photograph flowers.

If you want to take some closeups you have to be careful of the background. Single cut flowers might be photographed in front of an artificial blackboard or you can put them in an open doorway. This gives you a background which is black or gray provided the inside of the room isn't too light or the opposite wall isn't too near the door.

When using green peppers be sure that all seeds have been discarded. One seed left in the pepper may be so hot it will spoil the flavor of the food in which the pepper is used.

Externally Caused PIMPLES CLEARED
Miss Ruth Durfee, N. Y., writes: "Due to an external irritation, my face was covered with pimples. I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Results were very good and I have never been without Cuticura since." Write Cuticura Soap and Ointment, at your druggist's, 28c each, 50c for 3. Write Cuticura, Dept. 16, Malden, Mass.

The Drake

Then—the land slopes there, remember. Then he rolls down easy an' cautious, dressed in the dummy's clothes, with his shotgun. After a while he gets to his feet, to any car goin' by, or anyone passin', he's just a dummy. An' he can wait there for his chance to shoot Mary. An' he's also Lane, in the proper place to fire accordin' to your line."

Lane nodded slowly. "I begin to—that's why I placed him over by the garden, where the figures wouldn't have been in his way. I never thought about goin' on."

"The fireworks begin," Asey continued. "Mary Randall leaps across the window to get a cigarette box. Fellow shoots twice at her head outlined on the shade, all under the cover of the fireworks noise. He don't have to run. Because if anyone hears, or catches on, he's the dummy on the ground again. But no one comes. He's listening to the concerts on the short wave, with static galore, an' the fireworks is boomin'! He waits till he feels he's safe, and then cuts back to the woods to put on his own clothes. An' then, I'd say, to his great annoyance an' alarm, Zeb an' I come back durin' the process."

"But the shells," Lane said. "How do you fix 'em for—?"

"Wait. He's stuck 'em in his pocket—he must have reloaded, an' he knew better than to leave the shells. So he sticks 'em in his—that is to say the figure's—pocket. Then Zeb an' I come. We catch him. He changes in a flurry, puts the dummy's clothes back on 'em."

"But now wait," Lane said. "There were four dummies there when I came with the doctor. I know that. The fourth was on the ground then."

"Sure it was Zeb an' I go in, see? Fellow gets on his things, dresses the dummy, puts the hat on—it's held on with safety pins, see? Anyway, after dressin' up the dummy, he rolls it down the slope an' goes. The dummy lands back where it should. An' I'm willing to wager that about half-way home, the fellow remembers the shells in that pocket."

"Then why didn't he come right back?" Hamilton asked.

"Maybe he did. But Lane's here, and the doctor, and Weston, and Zeb and Jane and I. An' mind you from that time on, there's not a minute someone hasn't been around this house. He hasn't any chance to get to the dummy. See, he's got to take the coat off, an' hunt around in the pocket, because there's a hole in the pocket. It's easier for him to plant shells, an' he does it, probably while Prettyman is here. It's a lot better to give us fake shells that'll lead us to Jane an' her gun than to give Slade, than to get caught findin' in the real shells, or have anyone catch on where they are."

"All he really needed to do," Lane said, "was to pose as a tourist. The tourists never picked those figures apart the last two days."

"Probably would have, if he could have posed as one. But someone's on guard here all the time. Anyone tryin' to find anything is suspect. If he could be sure of gettin' the shells right off, that'd have been fine. But I had to grope for 'em. That's a stiff interlinin'." He knew he might have to grope, an' that'd have given him away."

"What was he after the night I me—?" Lane asked.

"Got to guess at that," Asey told her. "He had a silence. I shouldn't wonder if he didn't intend to silence the cop an' take his shells then. Maybe he was just waitin' for some chance when he could get 'em. But he runs into you, an' into me."

"Now, what about Eloise?"

"Let's settle this first. Tonight our friend comes right out in the open, apparently havin' decided he ain't gettin' places with his skulkin' in his car."

"My car," Lane said.

"Your car, that he's previously borrowed from the fillin' station. I should think that kid there might lose a lot of cars, if that's the way he looks after 'em. Anyway, fellow comes with his radio, goin' full blast, to make us think it's a bunch of kids or parkers or tourists, or all three in one. R'verses his ordinary methods. Grabs the figure that's down, thinkin' of course it's the same one that was down the other ference between a "dinner dance" and a "dinner and dance," if any?

Answer: The terms are really interchangeable, although "dinner and dance" is more usually taken to mean dinner in one place followed by dancing elsewhere, or if in the same house, the dinner tables would be cleared and dancing begin after dinner. A "dinner dance" could be the same, but on the other hand it could mean that people are all seated at tables around the ballroom floor and that people dance between the courses at dinner and throughout the evening—always returning after dancing to their own tables.

It Is Said--

That Lake Winnebago cottagers who are spending their spare time getting their summer homes on the lake into shape for the season are being hampered by the annual plague, lake flies. The "bug season" is on at the lake and the pests make themselves extremely troublesome to anyone who remain out of doors for any length of time.

That paper mill executives attending the fourth annual conference Thursday and Friday at the Institute of Paper Chemistry showed they preferred golf to bridge. About 20 were entered in the golf tournament while there were not enough interested players to carry on a planned bridge tournament. The bridge prize is being held "in default" until next year.

Governor Heil Crowns Cherry Blossom Queen

Sturgeon Bay—(P)—It was cherry blossom time in Door county yesterday when Miss Goldie Krueger, pretty miss from Egg Harbor township, reigned as queen.

Governor Julius P. Heil not only crowned Miss Krueger but in a broadcast address urged the state to cooperate in promoting the sale of the county's cherries.

The annual burst of blossoms drew thousands into the area. The governor was accompanied by Mrs. Heil, who received from Mary Alice Pleck a corsage of gardenias and cherry blossoms. Governor Heil received from Catherine Ellen Pleck a buttonhole bouquet of cherry blossoms. The girls are great-granddaughters of A. L. Hatch, pioneer cherry grower.

Governor Heil also laid the cornerstone of the new Door County museum. Supreme Court Justice Joseph Martin also participated in the ceremony.

The ceremonies will be held in Forest Hill cemetery Sunday, June 18.

Millwaukee—(P)—The Chicago district of the Epworth League of the Norwegian-Danish conference concluded its week-end meeting last night, with Oliver Carlson of Racine the new president.

Others elected included: Ellis Mooney, Cambridge, Wis., second department chairman; Mrs. Evelyn Erickson, Racine, junior league counselor, and Nels Johnson, Racine, dean of summer institute.

Way Cleared for U.A.W. Unions Affiliation With State Council

Racine—(P)—Lawrence Carlstrom, secretary of the United Automobile Workers union (CIO) district council, said last night that affiliation of N. A. W. unions with the Wisconsin Industrial Union council, CIO state central body, had been made possible.

The district council, which met here yesterday, named a five-man committee to find an "amicable and honorable basis." Carlstrom said, whereby the U. A. W. unions can obtain full voting strength within the state CIO organization and at the state convention here June 23-25.

Carlstrom said the affiliation had been made possible by permanent establishment of the CIO under its new name—Congress of Industrial Organizations.

VOTE A. F. L. AFFILIATION

Milwaukee—(P)—The Independent United Automobile Workers' union district council yesterday voted unanimously to recommend that its local unions affiliate with the A. F. of L., secretary Anthony Doria said following a meeting here.

The council's action preceded a referendum which began in the district today with distribution of ballots to pro-Martin locals in Wisconsin, Minnesota and Northern Illinois.

Doria said the referendum would continue through Saturday and that the ballots would be tallied by the local unions, at regional offices here, and then by the rank and file committee in Detroit.

The council elected temporary officers to permanent positions, including Elmer Yimney of Janesville, president; Andrew Somodi, Milwaukee, vice president, and Doria, secretary-treasurer.

There were 32 delegates present from 16 unions, Doria said.

bluntly in his arguments today that Pendegast sold his political influence for money.

Never before had that charge been made in open court.

Milligan, disclosed for the first time that the boss was promised $750,000 to bring about the 1935 settlement of a $9,500,000 state fire insurance rate case in which the bulk of the money was awarded to insurance companies and agents.

The $750,000 payment was not completed, however, Milligan explained, because of the death of Charles R. Street of Chicago, representative of the fire insurance companies, who collected the money and negotiated the deal with Pendegast.

Milligan said a total of $440,000 was paid, of which Pendegast got $315,000, and that the payoff man was A. L. McCormack, of St. Louis, then president of the Missouri Insurance Agents association.

Pendegast arrived at the federal building 17 minutes before scheduled pleading time.

Thirty minutes before his appearance, spectators were crowded into every available seat in the small courtroom. Only about 100 could be accommodated.

Pendegast sat between his nephew Jim Pendegast, heir apparent of the shattered machine, and Tom's son, T. J. Jr.

Dr. A. Sophian, Pendegast's physician for 25 years, said the deposed political czar was suffering from both intestinal and heart troubles.

Wants License Plate Slogans To Advertise Vacation Lures

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

Madison—Lee I. Yorkson, Waupaca, field manager for the Wisconsin Dairy Industries association, said that he has been informed by the secretary of state's office that manufacture of the new 1940 license plates containing the slogan "America's Dairyland" would begin about July 1. The plates are manufactured at the state prison at Waupun.

Yorkson is reputed to be the author of the slogan which the Wisconsin legislature decided would be an excellent means of advertising to the nation and the world Wisconsin's chief agricultural activity.

The 1940 plates will be painted white, with the inscription and the numerals in bright red, he believes.

Wants Vacation Slogan

Joe Alexander, head of the state's recreational advertising department—which promotes the lures of Wisconsin as a vacation center—this week suggested to a legislative committee that the next legislature might consider the possibility of alternating the license plate slogan to give impetus to Wisconsin's tourist trade.

While the 1940 plates bear the dairyland phrase, the 1941 plates ought to say something about "America's Vacationland," Alexander thought.

Senators last week enjoyed themselves in passing the license plate advertising bill. More than 12 amendments, suggesting the facetiousness or ingenuity of their authors, were offered before the bill was accepted. One Progressive representative later that it had been a little more time he would have suggested the phrase "Vote Progressive" as a good one for all Wisconsin's motorists to carry with them on their license plates.

Identify Wisconsin Birds

EASTERN BOB-WHITE

This is one of a series of 50 brief articles describing birds common to Wisconsin. It is suggested that readers clip these articles and illustrations for a scrapbook.

The Eastern Bob-White quail is the name applied by ornithologists to the common Wisconsin Bob-White. History indicates that there were few if any Bob-Whites in Wisconsin before settlers opened up the forests and planted crops.

Among all the feathered farm hands in Wisconsin the Bob-White deserves a place in the front rank as an efficient helper without bad habits. All summer long it lives on a diet of insects and through the winter it eats weed seeds, berries and grain that no one cared to harvest.

The fact that everybody knows the Bob-White is proof that he has adopted an efficient advertising system in constantly repeating his own name throughout the long summer day.

The Bob-White is about ten inches long, plump and stocky. It is a reddish-brown bird, mottled with black and white. In the female the white is replaced by buff.

The bird is an all-year resident of Wisconsin and finds the state's summers entirely to its liking. The Bob-White's big difficulty is in surviving the northern winters, particularly if they are severe and the snow is deep and covered. When its food supply is crushed and the weather is extremely cold, many quail die and unfavorable winter weather often destroys the bulk of the quail population.

Many quail are saved by people who put out feed for them when they lack a natural food supply.

Quail have a queer way of roosting in the ground, huddled together in a circle with their tails together and their heads outward. This formation helps them keep warm and serves as a method of keeping the entire group on guard against danger.

Quail build nests of grass, leaves and weed stems, well concealed in a tangle of long grass, often on the edge of a field or open place or beside a road or path.

COMING TO APPLETON THEATER

After breaking her engagement to one man for the fourth time, Myrna Loy finds solace and happiness in the arms of Robert Taylor in "LUCKY NIGHT," in which the striking Loy-Taylor combination is seen on the screen for the first time. The new picture, a rollicking comedy of modern New York life, opens Friday at the Appleton Theater where it will play an engagement of five days.

"Outside These Walls" will be seen on the same program, starring Michael Whalen, Dolores Costello and Virginia Weidler.

Movie Land Its People and Products

By Jimmie Fidler

Hollywood—Consider the contrasting careers of two Hollywood sisters—Sally Blane and Loretta Young. They started in pictures at approximately the same time, had much the same opportunities and shared equally—in my opinion, at least—the important screen assets of beauty, talent and charm.

Six or seven years ago it would have been possible to predict which of the two would become the greater star, yet today Sally is in virtual retirement. Loretta has climbed to the ladder's top.

I'm wondering which, in the true sense of the word, is the more successful—Sally, with her happy marriage, her two-year-old daughter, her completely normal life; or Loretta, with her bitter memories of an unpleasant divorce, her perishable fame, her huge income and the nerve-racking demands of a career? Sally has built a home; Loretta has built a house. The one can look to the future with confidence that time will only confirm her brand of success; the other must fear every new year as a new threat to her position. It's a problem in values—same versus normalcy, glitter opposed to restful candlelight, stimulating strife contrasted with security. I know Loretta too well to be blind to her craving for exactly the things that Sally has traded her chance of stardom for—and I honestly believe that Sally is, in her opinion, the more successful.

It will be interesting to watch the course of their youngest sister, Georgiana, who has just started as an actress. She is in a position to appraise the happiness of her two sisters from an ideal vantage point. Which one will she take as a model?

knees against a seat-back and push: Ode to mayhem: saying to Martha Raye, "Now, none of your lip!" It's no wonder so many of our stars are high-flyers—they've got more struts than any airplane. No one ever accused Bob Montgomery of shirking—but you could change the "h" to an "m" without being unjust. Wonder why almost all English actors merely look doleful when they're supposed to look romantic? Frankie urge when Dorothy Lamour is sob-singing: to offer her a handkerchief with a consolatory "There, there, you mustn't grieve."

Seems that some of Hollywood's underlings are beginning to tire of the perpetual campaign in behalf of European refugees. I hear that when the Paramount Post of the American Legion met the other evening to discuss plans for a stage show—a little receipts to go for refugee relief—quite a number of the members filed protests. After pointing out the lull in studio employment and the needy condition of many veteran set-workers who are idle, they wanted to know why charity shouldn't begin at home. They particularly asked the Legionnaires to consider the possibility that starvation, in Hollywood, can be just as painful as starvation in Germany.

Cars Sideswiped

Four persons were shaken up when two cars traveling in opposite directions sideswiped on Highway 47 a half mile south of Appleton early today. Orville Frederick, 18, 404 E. Circle street, was going south and Roy Just, 25, route 1, Black Creek, north when the collision occurred according to Jack Frenzy, county traffic officer. The drivers and Lawrence Preston, 22, Appleton, passenger in the Frederick car, and Phillip Weller, route 2, Black Creek, riding in the Just car were shaken up.

Three cars were involved in a minor accident on S. Memorial drive about 5:30 yesterday afternoon. Several cars were stopping for a traffic signal when a car driven by Alvin Schinke, 107 W. Wisconsin avenue, hit the rear of a car driven by Louis Wassman, 528 N. Garfield avenue. The latter machine struck a car driven by T. H. Brunke, 39 Bellaire court, according to police.

Cars driven by Ed Hawley, route 1, Menasha, and Ann Marie Piers, Kimberly, were slightly damaged in a collision on Washington street, about 1:30 Sunday afternoon. Hawley was going west on Washington street when the other machine pulled out of a parking stall at the curb, police said.

A bicycle driven by Margie Verkuilen, 1718 N. Superior street, was damaged after she had parked it on Superior street about 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon. John Wissman, 543 N. Division street, backed into it as he prepared to leave a parking stall.

Other Fatalities

Other deaths in the state: Leo Sternig, 20, Milwaukee. John Voss, 45, La Crosse. Robert Severson, 23, Dodgeville. Henry E. Nelson, 33, Milwaukee. Henry F. Hollis, 56, Hartford. Herman C. May, 65, Manitowoc. Sternig, wading in the Black river near Black River Falls, drowned Sunday when he stepped into a deep hole. He could not swim.

Voss fell from a boat into the Black river at La Crosse Saturday night while returning from a fishing trip. A companion notified authorities who immediately began a search for the body.

Severson was reported missing after a motorboat in which he was riding with three other Dodgeville residents overturned on the Wisconsin river near Spring Green Sunday night. His companions reached a sand bar and waited there until rescued, while Severson attempted to swim to shore. Authorities did not immediately recover his body.

Nelson was killed Sunday when a motorcycle on which he was riding with Miss Edith Lofton, also of Milwaukee, left the highway near the city and struck a guide post. Miss Lofton was cut and bruised.

Holle, owner of a Hartford hotel, lost his life Saturday when his automobile ran off Highway 83 and crashed into a North lake filling station. Three others in the car escaped with minor injuries.

May walking across a railroad trestle Sunday afternoon on his way to fish, slipped and fell when he attempted to climb out of the way of an approaching train, and drowned in the Manitowoc river.

Pinhead Motor Really Works

BASSETT STARTS HIS MOTOR WITH A CAMEL'S HAIR

New York—(P)—Merl Bassett, lumber mill electrician at Kelo, Washington, used 191 hours of his spare time to build what he calls the world's smallest motor. It cost one cent, weighs .01195 gram, and develops 54 ten-billionths of a horsepower. It's about the size of a pin-head and Bassett uses a single camel's hair to start it. He says building small motors is a swell cure for nervousness.

Pegler Flays at Political Use of Income Tax Returns

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER

New York—This business of pulling income tax returns out of the treasury files and blabbing the private details in congressional inquiries is not only crooked but a means of political intimidation. President Roosevelt prompts this observation by another of those executive orders authorizing this frisk by the Dies committee in the further course of its investigation of anti-American activities by communists and Nazi-fascist groups and individuals. This kind of executive order makes a handy stick with which to kill a snake, but it can be used to whine Americans as well as the pleasure of a president and any committee with a hate on. There are special weapons for killing snakes.

The income tax returns are supposed to be absolutely confidential between the victim and the treasury and subject to no scrutiny by anybody, including the courts, except where the treasury has some ground for proceeding against the taxpayer on charges of tax-law violation.

Even a criminal, operating a chain of brothels and transporting women across state lines in violation of the Mann act, even a counterfeiter who makes an income shoving home-made sawblades, is required to report his earnings and permitted to deduct his probable costs of operation, and the statements which he makes in the process of obeying one law are supposed to be privileged and not available to any other department which would like to use them as a confession that he violated another law. Any prosecution for those crimes is supposed to proceed independently, even though sworn admissions lie in a filing cabinet in the internal revenue.

Theoretically the department of justice can't even look at the returns for leads which would clew its young King Bradys onto dead-end evidence, but if you believe that the D. of J. doesn't take peeks now and again I just don't know what can be done for you.

Naturally, any American would like to know how much money the Nazi government has been piping into the anti-American fund to pay for sedition and the sabotage of the American form of government according to the Henlein method which wrecked Czechoslovakia.

Henlein Plan Model For Operation In U. S.

The Henlein conspiracy was the very model for the bund operations here. Henlein was a legal citizen of Czechoslovakia just as Kuhn, the American boss-boche, is a citizen of the United States. He was on intimate terms with Hitler, just as Kuhn is, and he took advantage of every exasperating weakness of the democratic system to protect himself from interference with his campaign to create internal dissension, discredit the Czech government

Spotted through the sessions also were speeches by Secretary Wallace; Robert E. The lone Republican official on the program is Representative Martin of Massachusetts, the party's leader in the house.

For Mr. Roosevelt, it will be one of his rare appearances before a business organization since he has occupied the White House.

with the people and make its destruction easy for his foe.

The communist method is almost identical, and it would be equally interesting to know how much money the Moscow government has eased into the bolo conspiracy and in what guises.

Now, if this authority were used only in such cases there would be no serious objection, because the country should use all its weapons to slay its enemies, especially those who operate within and claim for their operations the protection of American laws. But it is not used sparingly.

Used Last Year In Lobbying Controversy

Last year it was used as a weapon of political punishment against individuals who had opposed or in the sinister phrase, lobbied against the reorganization bill, and although the returns of those who lobbied for the bill as well, including Jimmy Roosevelt, the lobby committee was not inquisitive about his returns or those of any other administration lobbyist.

Even Senator Minton himself, who ran the show, didn't insist on throwing his returns on the table for expert analysis and sinister interpretation, although he would expect the pure in heart to set the example.

Income tax returns are confidential documents. They search the private lives of the victims, and there is no more excuse for the public inspection of yours, except in a tax case up for trial in court, than for the inspection of the president's own or his mother's or Jimmy's.

J., president of Campion academy at Prairie du Chien, was one of the guests and gave a short talk at the annual spring tea given by Campion Mothers club Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Charles Baldwin, 707 S. State street. He gave a resume of the extent of the Jesuit order, its purposes and its missionary work as well as educational work. Also present were two other faculty members from Campion academy, the Rev. Charles E. Mallon, S. J., senior adviser and English instructor, and the Rev. J. M. Taintner, S. J.

Mrs. Glenn J. Hoffman read a cutting of the recent Broadway success, "On Borrowed Time" by Paul Osborn. About 50 persons including members of the club and invited guests were present. Special prizes were awarded to Mrs. E. A. Oberweiser and Mrs. Raymond Peeters.

Father Taintner, who spent some time as a missionary in British Honduras, will be the speaker at next year's spring tea, it was announced. The club will sponsor a rummage sale Saturday morning in the State Bank building.

An open card party will be sponsored by Women's Catholic Order of Foresters at 8 o'clock Wednesday night at Catholic home, following a business meeting at 7 o'clock. Bridge, court whist, and schafskopf will be played. Mrs. Frances Morrow and Mrs. Joseph Wydeven and the May birthday members will be in charge.

Mrs. Bert Bewick played the piano for the drill and the singing of the pep song. Refreshments were served at tables decorated with various spring flowers, and each mother received a potted plant as a remembrance of the occasion.

Gruett Named Lutheran High Alumni Leader

WILMER Gruett was appointed chairman of the local branch of Lutheran High Alumni association which was organized at a meeting of graduates of the Lutheran High school of Milwaukee yesterday at St. Paul school. The Appleton branch will include graduates not only from Appleton but surrounding cities and towns.

Oscar Ketter, Milwaukee, president of the state alumni organization, spoke to the group yesterday and explained the purpose of the organization, namely the furthering of Christian higher education through which boys and girls may be provided with a solid Christian background. The Lutheran High Alumni association was organized over 30 years ago by some of the first graduates of the school.

The Misses Louise Schult, 802 N. Oneida street, and Elizabeth Kaspar, 703 N. Superior street, are acting secretaries of the branch. Miss Adele Wuergler, 915 E. Franklin street, was active in planning the organization meeting. The next meeting will be held after the graduates in this section of the state have been contacted.

Thirty members of Appleton Business and Professional Women's club drove to a wooded spot about a mile beyond Greenville Sunday morning where they ate an outdoor breakfast. A short hike was taken after breakfast. Miss Lydia Hollenbeck made arrangements for the event.

Thursday evening the club members will observe the heavens through the Lawrence college telescope in the observatory. C. T. Elias, local astronomer, will direct the telescope at objects of special interest, and the promises that the moon will be in perfect position to observe mountains and valleys. In addition, a number of double stars will be observed together with the great star cluster, 13 M in Hercules.

When the 151st General Assembly of the Presbyterian church in the United States opens Thursday at Cleveland, the Winnebago presbytery of the church will be represented by the Rev. W. R. Courtenay, Neenah, the Rev. Russell F. Peterson, Weyauwega, Wade Jones, Oshkosh, and I. C. Clark, Kimberly.

Church unity and union and the attitude of the church toward war are two problems that will be faced by the assembly during its 7-day meeting.

The 925 delegates commissioner to this national business gathering of the Presbyterian church will act on several formal overtures from presbyteries calling for organic union with other churches. It will also hear reports from agencies of the general assembly which during the last year have been holding organic union conferences with the Protestant Episcopal church and the Presbyterian church in the United States Southern.

Another report will tell of arrangements for completing organization, during the summer of 1941, of a World Council of Churches representing all principal non-Roman Catholic communions in the world.

500 Celebrate Reopening of Center Evangelical Church

MORE than 500 persons attended services celebrating the reopening of Center Emmanuel Evangelical church Sunday following remodeling and redecoration of the building.

The day's program began with a union holy communion service of the Greenville and Center Evangelical churches, and the Rev. W. G. Raddatz, district superintendent of the church, preaching on "Burning Hearts." The Greenville choir sang "I Find Thee So Precious" by Gray. Henry Riesenweber, superintendent, addressed the Sunday school. Immediately after the morning worship service, a group picture was taken in front of the church.

In the afternoon service two former pastors of the church, the Rev. H. P. Jordan, Greenleaf, and the Rev. William Abe, Reedsville, were the guest speakers. Special musical selections were furnished by the Greenville choir, a duet from Cicero and quartets from Seymour and Neenah.

Former Pastor Talks
An address by the Rev. George Nickell, Milwaukee, pastor of the church when it was erected 23 years ago, was a feature of the evening program. The Rev. Mr. Raddatz conducted the closing consecration service. Special music was furnished by the Emmanuel Evangelical church, Appleton, and the Rev. G. H. Blum, pastor of the Appleton church, said the devotions.

Instrumental selections at the evening program were "Will There Be Any Stars in My Crown?" and "The Old Rugged Cross," presented by Ruth and Earl Hoppe.

Other pastors who were present and assisted with the services were the Rev. H. A. Bernhardt, Seymour, and the Rev. Carl F. Zietlow, Neenah.

Women of the church served a lunch after the afternoon service.

On Wednesday the Rev. C. M. Schendel, pastor of the church, will leave for Fond du Lac with his lay delegate, Henry Holz, to attend the annual Wisconsin Conference of the Evangelical church, meeting there through Sunday.

Many Native Shrubs Can be Used to Beautify Residence

BY CLARA HUSSONG

Like the prophet who is without honor in his own country many of our wild shrubs, as attractive as cultivated species, find no favor in the eyes of the home gardener but are looked upon as undesirable outside their natural range. In turn the home gardener will purchase sometimes at great cost, a shrub which is native to some other part of the country or some foreign country.

Clara Hussong

During May and early June a great many of our wild shrubs are in blossom and drive through the country at this time will convince you of their attractiveness. Don't think, however, that because they are wild they can be transplanted easily and will grow like a weed in your garden because, except in a few instances, this is not the case.

Most wild shrubs are just as finicky about the type of soil, the amount of moisture, sunlight or shade as any foreign plant with a high-sounding Latin name, but if given this care they will invariably do better than imported plants because they are hardier. Some gardeners object to wild shrubs because, out in the wild, they grow in a straggly manner. Starting out with young plants and keeping them pruned will correct this fault.

Some Need Shade

Shall I get my wild shrubs from the woods and fields, or shall I buy them from the nurseryman, is a question often asked. There are a few wild shrubs which grow so profusely that you can safely transplant without fear of breaking either the written or unwritten laws of conservation. In most cases it is better to get your shrubs from a nurseryman who will give you adequate directions for their care.

If you are interested in getting wild shrubs for your home grounds take a drive one of these days through the countryside and notice the many species whose delicate blossoms are giving the landscape that lacy look so noticeable at this time of the year. Most of the shrubs have white or delicate pink blossoms, but a few colors of a deeper shade. Later in summer some of the plants will bear colorful berries or other attractive fruits and in autumn their leaves will turn as gay as those of larger trees.

You will notice that some shrubs grow tall and some low, some in a wide-spreading manner and others in a slender-tapering form. Picture their effectiveness around your home before making up your mind as to which kinds you would like. A few grow in open sunlight but a good many require some shade. The amateur gardener should avoid those growing in deep moist woods because they usually require more shade than an ordinary garden can provide.

In the sandy oak and pine lands where the soil is decidedly acid you will find a number of attractive shrubs which would look lovely on your home grounds but which are very difficult to grow. Arbutus, laurel, sweet fern, bearberry, and the many bog-growing heaths do not adapt themselves easily to cultivation because of the lack of acidity in ordinary garden soil.

The native shrub which has had great success with gardeners is ninebark, closely related to spirea and often sold by nurserymen as such. In the northern part of the state it grows abundantly along the banks of streams, edges of lakes and in moist rocky places. The leaves are three-lobed and the white blossoms borne in numerous clusters. By mid-summer the bushes are covered with bright red seed pods.

This is a large, spreading shrub which needs plenty of room but it does well in either shade or sun. It has been extensively planted in our city parks and could be used in large open yards. Our two native spiraea, meadow-sweet and steeplebush, are two smaller relatives of the ninebark which require a little more moisture. Meadowsweet can be found in almost any moist thicket growing among willows and dogwoods. Steeplebush, which bears rose-colored panicles of flowers in July and August, is the showiest of the group.

Wild Roses Do Well

Wild roses are beautiful and so easily grown that anyone can have them in his garden. Under cultivation the petals become larger and darker and the plants multiply rapidly. One variety, the low pastid rose, blossoms from June to September. Instead of begrudging the plant, many a farmer would thank you for removing it from his hayfield.

The various viburnums, dogwoods, junceberries, wild plums and sumachs are other shrubs which are easily grown. When you come upon a wild shrub which you think you would like to grow, find out its name. Study its habits and requirements, and if you think your garden a suitable place for it, try it. When doing your own transplanting, that is, when removing it from its native haunts, be sure to select a small plant and take along a ball of dirt around its roots to give it a good start.

When buying your shrubs from a nurseryman you will find it better to deal with one close to home than one in another part of the country. The plants will be better adapted to your soil and climate conditions and usually the cost will be less. To illustrate this point: a few years ago I was asked to view a rare and wonderful fern in someone's garden. The owner had sent to a southern city for it and had paid a very high price. It turned out to be the ostrich fern, rare in the south but abundant here and even found as far north as Alaska.

POOL ROOM LOOTED

Kenosha—Eugene Moriarity, proprietor of a pool room, told police yesterday the establishment's safe had been looted of $433.

What's New at the Library

Maurice Hindus, the author of "Red Bread" and "Green Worlds," presents a dramatic and breath-taking story as well as an historical document in his new book, "We Shall Live Again," dealing with Czechoslovakia and its people. Commissioned to write this book in the spring of 1938, Hindus went to Czechoslovakia where he found the country unlike any other Slav country in the world, a land of cheer and bright deeds and still brighter promise, one of the most highly advanced nations in the world. He went to wine-fests, weddings, singing festivals and funerals in order to absorb and understand the soul of the people, and he found Czechoslovakia a laboratory in social thought and action. He was there during the days of the Sudetan crisis, broadcasting from Prague to America, and his account of the people in those days of daily hope and agony and final collapse makes for absorbing reading.

Major league baseball as seen through the eyes of one of the game's greatest strategists is discussed in the book, "Baseballs" by Gordon S. (Mickey) Cochrane. Connie Mack called him the greatest catcher and strategist who came his way in three score years of association with the game. Cochrane reveals the secrets behind a great team, the plans, intrigues, heartaches and thrills which make up the sport. The book is illustrated with photographs from his own album.

A thoughtful piece of writing on the problems which women of middle age and those approaching that age must face and conquer in order to insure tomorrow's happiness is "Conquering Tomorrow," by Helen Johnson Keyes. The author puts forth pathways for happiness, keeping in tune with contemporary thought, the pursuits and diversions open to older people, the danger of assuming that to be attractive when older women must perpetuate the charms of youth, the habit that some women have of imposing their convictions on others, the importance of happiness and health.

Gardening days are here at last, and to help solve some of the problems involved in the cultivation of iris, a new book entitled "Rainbow Fragments" by J. Marion Shull, has been published. It is a handbook on the tall bearded iris written by one of the foremost authorities and cultivators in America, and it takes up all phases of selections, growing and breeding. There are many illustrations, some of them colored.

Comprehensive to the general reader, "The Book of Earths" by Edna Kenton tells the story of Man's progressive conceptions of the earth and its relation to the universe from earliest times to the present day. It is significant because of its inherent interest and for the influence the subject has had on man's existence in the small world which he knows.

A successful author whose first novel was published immediately after her graduation from college speaks to young writers for whom she claims a particular understanding. Alice Ross Colver's book, "If You Should Want to Write," grew out of a series of talks which she had with her young son, Jack, when he decided to be a writer. She covers such fundamental points as the choice of story material, approach to a subject, practice of writing, preparation of manuscripts and markets.

"Who Are These Americans?" is the title of a new book by Paul B.

BY BILL DOWLING
KAUKAUNA — Eddie Schuler hurled the Mellow Brews to a 6-hit, 2-0 shutout over Green Bay yesterday as Kaukauna racked up its third straight victory in Fox River Valley league play. Single tallies in the fourth and sixth innings were all the star right-hander needed to work on.

The winning marker was manufactured in the fourth on two hits and Nockers' wild pitch. With two away, Icky Van Drasek lined a double down the left foul line and moved to third as Nockers unleashed a wild one to Wurdinger. The Kaukauna first baseman then singled through the box to plate Van Drasek.

Squeeze Play Works
In the sixth Kappell led off with a double to left. Manishoff followed out, Kappell taking third. Van Drasek then laid down a perfect bunt, beating it out and scoring Kappell. Wurdinger and Busse lofted to the outfield.

Aided by a double play, only nine visitors came to bat in the first three innings. Stillier led off the third with a single, but Nockers batted into a double killing, short to second to first. Busse's single with one away in the second was the only fly of the first three frames for the Kaukas.

Collins began the fourth with a safety for Green Bay and reached third before the inning was over, but Vils nabbed Allard's long fly to retire the side. Kaukauna made only one hit after scoring in the sixth. Gert beating out a bunt in the seventh.

Weather Threat
Schuler successfully weathered a Green Bay threat in the sixth, with one down Collins got a free ticket to first. Holmbeck bounced to Eddie Schuler, who attempted to force Collins and threw the ball into centerfield. Collins taking third. Dobkowski then flew to Vils in right, the Kaukauna manager pegging home to nip Collins trying to count after the catch. The visitors made trouble for the last time in the seventh. Allard and Maes fled off with singles. Van Vonderden fled out and Stillier forced Maes at second. Schuler purposely passed Schuette and his strategy was rewarded when he threw out Nockers on an easy rollout.

Schuler set four visitors down on strikes, with Nockers whiffing five. Green Bay—ABR H

Green Bay West Wins Title After Fight With Fondy

Terrors Take First in Medley; Larson Ties In High Jump

BY GORDON MCINTYRE
WINNING first in the distance medley relay, the event for which it pointed, and gathering enough other points here and there to total 33 7/12 points, Appleton High school track and field squad placed fifth in the annual Fox River Valley conference relay meet here Saturday at Whiting field of Lawrence college.

Green Bay West, the favorite, won the title with 56 5/6 points but received a scare from an unexpected source when Fond du Lac placed second with 53 points. Fondy had track only the last few years but Saturday the squad was pointed for an upset victory for Coach Holloway who is recuperating from appendicitis in a Fond du Lac hospital.

East Is Third
Third place went to Green Bay East with 48 1/3 points, Manitowoc was fourth with 41 1/4 points, Appleton fifth, Oshkosh sixth with 30 and Sheboygan North, represented by one boy, seventh with 5 points.

The "one-man track team" was Roger Loving who was entered in the broad jump and won first. He leaped 21 feet, 7 1/2 inches in his first trial.

Appleton scored ten points when Rollins, Koletzke, Schmidt and Vogt won the medley. Rollins ran the 220, Koletzke the 440, Schmidt the half mile and Vogt the mile. Schmidt gave Vogt a slight lead for the mile run and he needed it because Oshkosh's miler threatened to beat him out in the final 200 yards. Vogt had enough left, however, so that when challenged on the last 50 yards, he spurred and won.

Larson Ties in High Jump
The Terrors totaled 20 points in the relay races and the remaining 13 7/12 in the special events. Larson stayed with two other high jumpers and earned a tie for first place at 5 feet, 8 1/2 inches while Werner figured in a 3-way tie for fifth. In the pole vault, Gertsch figured in a 4-way tie for fifth. Heinrich took second in the shot with Rollins fourth. In the discus, Dutcher was the only Terror to place. He was fifth.

Three relay records were bettered during the afternoon. West turned in the shuttle relay in 1 minute, 41 seconds against the old time of 1 minute, 49 seconds. West's 440-yard relay team also shaved a record being clocked in 45.2 seconds against 45.6 seconds.

The other record went to East's 880-yard relay team which was clocked in 1 minute, 34.2 seconds against 1 minute, 36 seconds.

Summary of events:
Shuttle relay—Won by West team of Moffitt, L. Erickson, Crawford and Young; East, second; Appleton, third; Fond du Lac, fourth; Manitowoc, fifth. Time—1:04.1 (record: old record 1:04.9).

440-yard relay—Won by West team of Campbell, Staszak, Fonder and Powers; Fond du Lac, second; Manitowoc, third; East, fourth; Oshkosh, fifth. Time—45.2 seconds (record: old record 45.6 seconds).

880-yard relay—Won by East team of Tilkens, Van Laarhoven, Lambert, and Bourguignon; West, second; Fondy, third; Manitowoc, fourth; Oshkosh, fifth. Time—1:34.2 (Record: old record 1:35).

Gartzke Doubles With Bases Full For Neenah Win

Drives in Winning and Tying Runs to Beat Little Chute

NEENAH — When a batter approaches the plate with the bases loaded and his team trailing by a close count of 3 to 2, he is on the proverbial "spot," and he can become a hero or the goat.

But Gartzke, who receives or plays third base equally well for the Neenah Merchants, was in just that dilemma Sunday afternoon and his timely double made him the star of the game.

Gartzke's double gave Neenah a 4 to 3 victory over Little Chute and it was the Merchants' first victory this season in the Fox River Valley league. The game was played at Washington park diamond.

Score Two Runs
The Merchants counted two runs in the opening inning. K. Handler brought in the first count, and then Fahrenkrug and Gullickson pulled a double steal with Fahrenkrug scoring. Little Chute scored in the second inning and then took the lead during the first half of the sixth. With the bases loaded, Gartzke hoisted out his double driving in the tying and winning runs. Gartzke also made a spectacular 1-handed catch, scooping Lamer's line drive off the toe of his shoe.

Outside of the timely hitting and double steal, the contest actually was a pitching duel between Christofferson, Neenah's slinger, and Caul, who hurled for the Hollanders. Neenah batters nicked Caul for seven safeties, while Christofferson restricted the Hollanders to five hits. The latter fanned six batters and walked seven, while Caul struck out nine and walked four.

Cheslock and Gullickson shared batting honors for the Merchants, each counting two hits. Bongers got two hits for the Little Chute nine.

Cedar Rapids, Iowa — John Schmerlin, Neenah, Wis., Lawrence college, retained his Midwest conference singles tennis championship here Saturday. He won handily over his four opponents. The doubles team of Harry Jackson and Ed Chambers won its first round match but lost in the second. However, the four points credited to Schmerlin plus the one credited to the doubles team gave Lawrence the team trophy.

for the third consecutive year and although the 10 flat time was far from his best time he had no one to push him. The 220 was practically a repetition of the shorter race with Graf running the fastest heat and taking one tenth off in the walk-away final. His time was 22.5 around one curve.

The 440 was a close race with Glen Lockery pulling up the last 50 yards to take fifth for Lawrence. The high jump was unusual in that five men cleared 5 feet, 10 inches, but only Ralston, Coe, cleared 6 feet, the winning height. Jack Crawford, Lawrence, tied for second place.

Dizzy Dean Starts, Finishes First Game for Cubs; Downs Boston Bees With Three Hits

CHICAGO — (AP) — Dizzy Dean, making his first league start of the season, thrilled 21,684 spectators Sunday with a three-hit performance that gave the Chicago Cubs a 4 to 0 victory over the Boston Bees.

Most of the spectators had stood in the ticket line in the rain which held up start of the game for more than a half hour.

There was no question about Dean's readiness to take his place among the Cubs' starting pitchers. His performance was reminiscent of so many he turned in during his heyday with the St. Louis Cardinals.

The Bees made one scratch hit in the first inning and two more blows in the seventh. Not a single Bee reached third base and only one got as far as second. Only four reached first, one of them as a result of an error by Steve Mesner in the sixth inning. Dean didn't walk a batter and from the first through the fifth he retired 13 Bees in succession.

Never Came Close
When the game was over he declared his arm was as strong at the finish as it was at the start.

Jim Turner started for the Bees and held the Cubs in check until the sixth when they drove him from the box with a three run, three hit attack. Stanley Hack walked to open the assault, Bill Herman sacrificed and Augie Galan, Hank Leiber and Joe Marly followed with doubles to send Turner to the showers.

The Bees never came close to scoring. Their best effort came in the seventh when, with one out, Buddy Hassett singled to center and moved to second on Al Simmons' infield out. Mesner made a great stop of Ralph Hodgins' grounder back of second, but could not recover the ball in time to throw out the runner. Hassett, however, overran third and was thrown out. Herman to Hack. Dean then retired the Bees in order in the eighth and ninth innings.

Downs Menasha Falcons After Staving Off Late Inning Rallies

New London—Bunching four hits in three innings for six runs, the New London Merchants team eked out a win over the Menasha Falcons by a score of 6 to 5 in a Fox River Valley league game here Sunday. The New London squad staged a four run rally in the sixth inning, mixing two hits, two walks, and one error for their runs.

Malloy started the rally with a walk. Sweedy, who was next batter, lifted a long fly to deep center field for an out. Fitzgerald followed with a hit, Sabott was safe on an error by the Menasha second baseman, Malloy scoring. Ned Deming, playing his first game after returning home from college, drove in the second run of the inning. Orin Krohn, New London's slugging catcher, was given an intentional pass, filling the bases. Schimke, a pinch batter, sent a long fly to the outfield and while the Menasha boys threw the ball around two New London men scored after the catch.

Two home runs featured the other New London hits. Fitzgerald got the first one in the first inning with nobody on the bases. Orin Krohn, the boy from last year's Northern State League, kept up his hot pace by hitting his third home run of the season in as many games.

Menasha had three big innings—the seventh, eighth, and the ninth. In the seventh, B. Paulowski made first base on a wild throw of Deming's to first. Kalakowski doubled, scoring Paulowski. After the next two men reached base, one by a hit and the other by a walk, Sabott pulled himself together and finished the inning with no more runs.

Sabott was also in the hole in the eighth and ninth innings. He had a total of thirteen strike outs, while he walked only three. He was effective in the pinches. He allowed only one hit from the first to the seventh inning. Stutzkowski, Falcon pitcher, pitched a good game allowing only four hits, striking out four, and issuing four free passes to first base.

Sixteen Drivers Qualify For 500-Mile Auto Grind

INDIANAPOLIS — With sixteen drivers qualified at speeds ranging from 120.138 down to 120.935 miles an hour, the remainder of the field for this year's renewal of the annual 500-mile speedway race tuned their mounts in preparation for the resumption of qualification Wednesday afternoon.

Only Babe Stapp of Los Angeles was able to make a complete qualifying run at yesterday's trials as a sudden downpour drenched approximately 35,000 fans and made the north curves of the track too slick for high speed.

Stapp turned in an even 125 miles an hour for his ten-mile test. His car is an Italian-built Alfa Romeo and is the same driven by Rex Mays in 1938 and 1939.

Kelly Pettila, Stapp's fellow townsman and winner of the 1935 race, shut off his motor before he had completed one lap yesterday. He still has two more qualifying trials and served notice he intended to shoot for a new one-lap and qualifying record.

Drivers ready to take the track Wednesday are Pettila, Bob Swanson of Los Angeles, Rex Mays of Glendale, Calif., Joel Thorne of New Rochelle, N. Y., Zeke Meyer of Philadelphia and Ira Hall of Terre Haute.

Meanwhile, Johnny Seymour of Grose Pointe, Mich., burned in a spectacular wreck and fire Saturday, was reported recovering. Hospital attendants said he was suffering much pain, but apparently was not in a serious condition. He was given a blood transfusion, however, as a "precautionary measure."

The tentative lineup for the first sixteen cars and their qualifying speeds:

First row: Jimmy Snyder, Chicago, 130.138 miles an hour; Louis Meyer, Huntington Park, Calif., 130.067; Wilbur Shaw, Indianapolis, 129.977.

Second row: Ted Horn, Los Angeles, 127.986; Chet Miller, Detroit, 126.316; George Bailey, Detroit, 125.821.

Loren Forman Gets Niles R. Johaneson Fellowship To Study in Sweden

Loren Verne Forman, Ames, Ia., third year student at the Institute of Paper Chemistry, will spend the next year studying in Sweden through a fellowship of the American-Scandinavian foundation, New York, which he has been awarded. The fellowship was established by Niles R. Johaneson of the Celulose Sales company, New York, and gives the winner an opportunity to choose the school in which he wishes to study. Forman also will have time to spend in various paper mills in Sweden. The student obtained his bachelor of science degree in chemical engineering at the Iowa State college in 1934. He then entered the institute and received his master of science degree at Lawrence college in 1936. He spent two years with a Michigan Paper mill and returned to the institute in 1938. For Sweden the latter part of the summer and following his year in that country will return to the institute to complete study for his doctor's degree.

Everybody Knows American Tax System Needs Overhauling but Nobody Will Attempt to Do It

BY MORGAN M. BEATTY

Washington—(AP)—Tax talk late in the spring of the year 1939 means more patches for the seal of Uncle Sam's tax trousers. Those tax trousers are already filled with patches from gallus hutch to cuff. Everybody admits they're too full of patches. Everybody who knows anything about taxes agrees that new trousers—a complete new tax system—is a desperate need.

But it is simpler for the congress and an administration—any congress and any administration—to talk and patch and patch and talk.

Also it's safer. The terrible task of designing a complete new system would take months, perhaps years. And when it was all put together, there'd be no guarantee that it would fit. And congress would be right where it is now, taking it on the chin for not solving that enigma known as the nation's tax problem.

The American tax problem has been accumulating for 150 years. Through all those years, the tax structure has been building, willfully, a piece at a time. Nobody seems to have the courage to do it. The result: Today no citizen knows how many taxes or how much taxes he pays. Leastways no reputable statistician is willing to stick his neck out and estimate the average citizen's tax bill. Taxes are hidden in tariffs, cigarettes, automobiles, tire, parts, cameras, movie tickets, lipstick—nearly everything you buy.

Panics Slash Returns

During panics, such as those in 1893 '97, and 1907 and '21, tax receipts fell off with the national income, and the federal government went deep in the red. But along came good years after each depression, and increasing tax payments, or higher tax rates, paid the government out—or nearly out—of debt.

But not so with the latest depression. Something happened to our economic system. The tax system, patchwork that it was, went completely haywire with business. At the same time social services came a necessity. They cost money. Better national defense in a topsy turvy world seemed imperative. That, too, costs big money.

Tax rates have been upped steadily, but to little avail. Alcohol taxes returned to carry part of the load, but they, too, fell short. The result today is a 40-billion-dollar national debt, climbing at the rate of four billion dollars a year.

The ideal answer to the problem is prosperity. Tax receipts go up with the national income. An 80-billion dollar national income with the present rates would solve the problem. "That income would be twice our national income at the bottom of the depression, and would practically double tax receipts. It's twenty billion ahead of our present income." Right there is the start of the argument headlined daily in newspapers. The question is how to get that 80-billion-dollar income. Big business, and so-called conservative congressmen insist that the proper start is encouragement for business. They hope business can be coaxed into investments that will bring an 80-billion income.

Too Many Burdens

They said that the complexity of excess profit taxes, corporation income taxes, capital gains taxes, gift and inheritance taxes, are scaring people and corporations with money to invest. They say these investors are unwilling to take the normal risks of new enterprise PLUS these heavy taxes for fear of losing both principal and profits. They tell you it's new enterprises that add jobs and increase the national income. At the present stage of the tax talk, the Roosevelt administration is not convinced by these arguments. The president says the government can't afford to cut taxes. He's afraid simplifying the corporation taxes will create new loopholes for tax chiselers, or, at best, reduce the government's revenue. Some New Dealers insist there's no uplift in simplifying taxes for corporations, anyway. Besides, they argue that the national wealth still needs a certain amount of redistribution. It's a lot like the argument over which came first, the hen or the egg. And the answer is the same: Nobody can prove anything. Chances are 100 to 1 that congress will do a little patching here and there, and hope against hope for that 80-billion-dollar income.

night. Only Lane's mended the one he wants, and this is the other. But not being a fool, when he's through searchin', he dumps it out on the road so's we'll think that it was just kids havin' fun."

"Wouldn't he have done the same," Kay said, "if he'd got the right figure?"

"Sure. He'd have dumped that after he got the shells. But it come over me sudden about Lane fixin' em, an' I just wondered if there wasn't a chance the feller got fooled. If he'd take the one nearest the road, not this that was farthest away. Wouldn't have gone at my tires so careful, so's not to be followed in case of a slip. There was a risk involved in stealin' that figure, but it was important enough to him to take it. Well, Lane, there you are. That's how Mary Randall was killed. There's your shells."

"Isn't there a chance that he might come back for the other figure?" Kay asked.

"He might. Stick 'em back, Hamilton, an' have someone watch. But I don't think he'll be back. He ought to be disposin' of his shotgun. If you hadn't talked so about that figure fallin', Lane, I'd have passed this off as kids. After all we can't prove your car was taken, even though we know it. Maybe Kay an' I followed two other cars. Maybe Sammy slashed the tires. But—well, we found the shells. Now all you got to do is to find a gun that fits."

"That's all," Lane's laugh was hollow. "That's all. But one thing I know, those shells didn't come from Jane's gun. Altogether different mark. We'll play with 'em for prints. Why do you suppose, Asey, after stealin' Jane's—that is, Slade's—gun, another was used?"

"Praps he preferred his own to a mail order one," Asey said. "Praps it was just his idea to plant all he could on Jane, in passin'."

"What I'd like to know," Kay said, "how did he manage to get back so quickly, if he took Lane's car?"

"After he whizzed by us," Asey said, "after the axle broke, he might have turned right around. Might have been the first car that passed by us. Can't tell. Probly he'd already thrown the figure out by then—Lane, I hear any number of cars outside."

Zeb Chase dashed in, followed by Jeff Leach and Weston and Brinley. "Weston and I," Brinley said, "want to know what's going on."

"I've been tearing around," Zeb said, "trying to find some trace of you, and when I just went back to Aunt Sara's, Jeff said he'd called Brinley, and Brinley said you'd been there—what's happened?"

"Come on, Kay," said Asey. "Zeb's takin' us home with Jeff."
